House Call Inspections, Inc. is owned by Wendell Dennison, an ASHI Certified Home Inspector, a GAHI Certified Inspector, and an ICC Code Certified Inspector. Wendell has personally performed over 4,900 inspections over the past 15 years and is exceptionally qualified to inspect the house you plan to purchase. At House Call Inspections, you are encouraged (but not required) to follow the inspector around so you can see the same things he sees. That way, you get a much better understanding of the house's condition and a better perspective on what's normal wear and tear and what needs to be repaired, improved, or maintained. If you've never attended a home inspection, it's likely to be an eye-opening experience. Most people have no idea how many systems and components are evaluated, many of which they would never have even thought about checking. After going through the house with House Call, you'll have a much more thorough understanding of what you're purchasing.

“ The best home inspection is performed not by one who sees the problems, but by one who can clearly communicate in layman's language what the problem is and why it's a problem. Wendell is the most patient and amiable inspector I've come across. He isn't satisfied until the client understands clearly what is at issue. Until then, he doesn't feel his job is complete. ”
